

New Green Business Investment Models at Wall Street Green Trading

Contact: Peter Fusaro
212-316-0223
peter@energyhedgefunds.com

New York (For immediate release) 2006 is showing that new green business models for investors have finally emerged for carbon, renewable and clean tech markets. The Wall Street Green Trading Summit is a one-stop shop to hear from the experts on all the hot topics for investment during the two day summit at Bloomberg headquarters. This year's summit is hosted by Global Change Associates and Hedge Connection. Sponsors includes BP, Alston Bird and Brown Rudnick with the support of the Energy Hedge Fund Center.

Learn from the experts of Point Carbon, Evolution Markets, EcoSecurities and Element Markets on market developments in both the US and European carbon trading markets and what impact the Kyoto Treaty has had on market development.

Following the year of renewables and clean tech rhetoric, find out what venture capital, hedge fund, and private equity is doing in the green trading space, and what they are looking for next year.

Find out the latest carbon sequestration technology plays into these emerging green trading markets.

“We realize not everyone has the time to travel to be our event so this year we are using state of the art technology at Bloomberg headquarters to globally webcast the entire two day summit, “ said Peter C. Fusaro, conference organizer and co-principal of the Energy Hedge Fund Center LLC. Summit attendees are already dialing in from Australia, Canada and Europe. So, if you can't make the conference, tune into our global webcast.

For more summit information, please contact either Peter Fusaro at peter@energyhedgefunds.com or Lisa Vioni at Hedge Connection at lvioni@hedgeconnection.com or 941-383-9768.

#####